Current Comment

Now that the big day is a pleasurable memory, the editorial eye is torn between a desire to regard the New Year's holiday and the fond contemplation of my new desk. The new gadget was brought by Santa Claus who, doubtless, hopes that its use will improve the quality of my compositions. Heretofore the weekly offering has writhed its way out of a madly jumping typewriter, none too securely lashed to a flimsy card table which perisists in crossing the floor at the rate of a foot for every 50 or 60 words. And trying to write when one's writing equipment is doing its best to get out into the kitchen is very trying to say the least. All that's changed now, and, when I get used to it, I'm sure my disposition will change too, for the better.

The wreckage customary to the season is still strewn about the "jernt," and all hands had a tremendously successful time. In another week Christmas trees will be relegated to backyards, and we'll all, to borrow a favorite phrase of politicians and optimistic economists, "rapidly get back to normal."

With the new license plate season looming on the horizon, it might interest you folks to know that these highly necessary bits of tin this year cost the state of California $130,000 more than the price quoted by the lowest bidders for the job, or a difference of three cents a pair. And this is how it came about:

The contract to furnish plates was let to two stamping concerns, one in Oakland and one in Los Angeles, at 11 1-2 cents a pair. The low bidders were two Los Angeles outfits who bid eight and one-half cents a pair, but were not awarded the contract on the grounds that there existed a doubt of their ability to deliver on schedule.

Such doubt on the part of the authorities would ordinarily justify their reluctance to award the contract to the lowest bidders, but in this instance the lowest bidders seemed capable enough, and were prepared to post a $350,000 bond guaranteeing delivery according to schedule.

In view of these well-substantiated facts, it appears that the state —and that means you and me, and all the other boys and girls—is paying a rather high premium for its 1934 license plates.

I would not for the world hint at the possibility of graft in the transaction. I'll leave that to my gentle and slightly suspicious readers who, if they have kept their ears to the rail, already know that the present state administration has been none too careful of the manner in which hardly collected tax moneys have been spent.

(It is understood, of course, that all bidders were obliged to specify the same kind of steel and enamel. I mention this to show that the low bidders were not attempting to foist a low grade article upon the public.)

Of course, $130,000 is small potatoes to the state capitol boys who dish it out in millions without batting an eye-lash—and, presumably without a thought of personal reward.

The "watch-dog" of the treasury must be losing his grip. Can't take it any more, eh?

Prominent citizens of the county seat, rudely awakened by the recent lynching which riddled the fair 'scutcheon of San Jose and

Mrs. Warren Shelly Badly Injured In Automobile Wreck

Mrs. Warren Shelly of Ben Lomond, formerly a resident of Campbell, and sister-in-law of Mrs. J. C. Ainsley, is in a critical condition at the Santa Cruz hospital, suffering from severe injuries sustained in an automobile accident near Watsonville Saturday.

Mr. Shelly was knocked unconcious in the crack-up which resulted for Mrs. Shelly in a broken ankle, shattered kneecap, and a compound arm fracture.

They were given first aid at Watsonville, and Mrs. Shelly was later taken by ambulance to Santa Cruz, where yesterday morning she underwent an operation for her knee injury.

Mrs. J. C. Ainsley went over to Santa Cruz immediately she was notified of the accident.

WALTER B. JONES, WATER COMPANY EMPLOYEE, QUITS

With 15 years of faithful service with the Campbell Water company to his credit, Walter B. Jones, accountant for the local concern since 1918, will retire the first of the year.

Mr. Jones, who was a boyhood chum of the late George E. Hyde when they were residents of Benecia, came here in 1916 and secured a position in the office of the George E. Hyde and company packing plant, where he worked for two years. Early in 1918 he was put in charge of the Campbell Water company accounts, a position he has since held to the entire satisfaction of the company.

Though still quite active, Mr. Jones has recently come to the conclusion that it is time he started taking things easy, according to R. H. Hyde, manager of the water company, who said that Mr. Jones is expecting to continue his residence at the Jones home on Alice avenue.

A regular business meeting of Orchard City grange last night was followed by a Christmas party at which young and old alike thoroughly enjoyed themselves. A beautifully decorated tree bore gifts candy and apples for the children and their elders, and the distribution of gifts was followed by a supper of sandwiches, cake and coffee.

Mrs. Farr favored with a vocal solo, accompanied by Hugh Cramer on the violin, who later played a violin solo. Mr. Gordon, San Jose photographer, lead in community singing.

A play by Richard Shelley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Shelley of Cambrian, entitled "The Play's the Thing," will be enacted on the "First Nighters'" program over KGO Friday evening at 7 o'clock, according to announcements made early this week.

THE PAGE DAM---NOW WE HAVE IT---NOW WE DON'T

The Story of A Smart Move, As of Before The Blow-up.

The Latest Development, Brought To Attention of The Campbell Press On Eve of Publication. Work On the Page Dam Is Halted—But Why?

Work which started Thursday on the reconstruction of the old Page dam south of Campbell is being rushed forward by a crew of about 20 men, under the supervsion of George Page, original builder of the structure, in the hope of finishing it before the next heavy rainfall.

Located just north of the gravel pit in the Los Gatos creek, the dam at one time served to divert water enough to irrigate a large part of the territory to the north and west of Campbell, and so served until someone got the bright idea that it would be cheaper to irrigate from a well than to buy water from the Page ditches. The idea spread rapidly, and proved to be a source of much gratification and considerable profit to the owners of good wells—until the underground water level receded to the point of exhaustion.

Today we find the Santa Clara County Water Conservation district taking a page, literally, from the past. With the completion of the dam, the site of which was recently acquired by the conservation district, ten acre feet of water may be impounded behind the barrier of concrete and stone, which is to be eight feet high and 200 feet across.

The storage capacity in itself is negligible, but the dam will be perfectly adequate as a spreader to filteration areas, and as a diverting point into the old Page ditches, which are to be cleaned out and once more put into use. It may even be possible that the old four-foot underground flume which used to carry water directly north through town may be repaired and used to deliver surplus water to the far-flung ranches it used to serve.

It is unquestionably a step in the right direction, according to William Finnemore, long an advocate of irrigation by diversion of flood waters, who is lending his wide knowledge of local flood conditions to the project.

It is expected that the job will be completed within three weeks of the starting date.

With the community jubilant over the prospect of being able to divert this winter's flood waters of Los Gatos creek into useful channels through the construction of a dam at the site of the old Page dam near the gravel pit south of town, and with work actually started on the structure under the direction of George Page and William Finnemore (two men who probably know more about the habits of the Los Gatos Creek than any other two men in the valley,) it becomes the unpleasant duty of the Campbell Press to report that work on the project has been summarily halted.

Yesterday George Page, supervisor of construction, was notified by attorneys for the Santa Clara County Water Conservation district, that if he continued operations he would do so at his own risk, and that the district would not be responsible for any construction bills. Word from the attorneys said that the entire proceeding was illegal, inasmuch as the law in these instances requires that any job amounting to one thousand dollars or over must be let by contract.

And this in the face of the board of directors' unanimous vote to accept George Page's offer, which was that he would give the dam site to the district, and in return be permitted to have the job of building the dam. It was by the unanimous approval of the water district board that operations were started on the dam last Thursday, and if the board was prepared to overlook minor legal technicalities in their eagerness to get the dam built and ready for flood waters, who else, then, should throw a monkey-wrench into the machinery?

Is there, somewhere in the organization, an hireling who, under the informal contract let to George Page, will not get as big a cut out of the deal as would be the case were activities allowed to dawdle along until such time as they could be started down the ordinary channels? Is there going to enter into this vital proposition a mess of petty politics and childish, dog-in-the-mangerish situations? Or are all concerned going to get togther on this thing, forget their small differences, and their selfishness? Here we have an opportunity to at least partially alleviate an accute and dangerous situation, and we stand about, scrapping among ourselves, playing politics, and raising hell generally with the opportunity that has come about through the efforts of a group of men who realize the importance of water conservation, and who have worked long and hard to relieve the situation in this community.

It is the firm intention of the Campbell Press to find out the real reason behind this stoppage, and if, in its search for truth, it is able to make things uncomfortable for anyone whose personal greed may be responsible for the unseasonable delay, we shall take great pleasure in so doing.

LICENSE PLATE SERVICE OFFERED FREE BY HYDE

Ralph H. Hyde, local insurance man with offices in the water company building, announced today that he would this year, as in the past, maintain a free license plate service at his place of business.

Those wishing to avoid a trip to town, Mr. Hyde said, may bring their white slip and three dollars to his office between the hours of 8 and 9 a. m., and receive their plates at the same place the following morning.

Mr. Hyde also urged holders of two-year operators licenses to check up to see whether or not their present license is valid. Many operators who have these two-year licenses have not had them renewed since they were issued in August, 1929, he said. This service is also available at Mr. Hyde's office at no cost.

Famous Trick Hen, 8 Years Old, Is Stolen

"'Twas the night before Christmas, and all through the house, not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse . . ." But about that time a hungry citizen was raiding Miss Vina Lewis' hen house with a view to filling the pot for Christmas dinner.

Among the missing hens, of which there were three, was Pickit, an eight-year-old hen, long famed as a trickster who, in her early youth, enjoyed riding about the country perched on her mistress' arm, or a stroll up Market street in the same position.

The foul was carefully raised in the Lewis household, and among her more noteworthy tricks was that of rapping on the back door with her beak when meal times came around.

gave Hairbrain Rolph an opportunity to make a sap of himself, are in the throes of a praiseworthy, if somewhat stupid, move to reform California criminal precedure. The three important changes to be sought would permit 10-2 verdicts by juries; would permit the judge to discuss evidence with the jurors, and would permit the placing of criminals on the stand during their own trials.

I do not question the need for reform in this field, but I thnk the proposed changes are inadequate. Why not be thorough, and start a campaign to make all judges federal appointees, to hold office until such time as senility overtakes them? Why not maintain professional juries, versed in the law and impervious to the razzle-dazzle of eloquent barristers?

With judges beyond the reach of politics, and with juries using their heads instead of their emotions in the search for justice, we might get somewhere. As a matter of fact, judges in this fair land of ours have broader powers than most people realize, but the political set-up is such that the average judge seldom employs the full leverage of his authority.

For instance, a trial judge can reach even beyond the walls of his court room and penalize any newspaper which may be publishing alleged evidence not legally admissable at a trial, or other matter which derogates from the fairness of court proceedings toward the defendant or the public. How often have you seen such stuff in print—and when have you ever heard of American judge putting a muzzle on a peccable press? More likely you will find the press putting the screws on the judge, as in the case of Judge Pliny Marsh who, before he sentenced Loretta Lee, convicted of participation in the armed robbery of a jewelry store, was visited by the representative of a newspaper which was opposed to severe sentences for women. The judge, who refused to reveal his purpose, was warned that a heavy sentence would likely result in his defeat at the next election. The woman was given from seven and one-half to 15 years, with recommendation for ten; the newspaper kept its word and got revenge at the polls. The judge went back to a law practice which had completely fallen to ruins during his years on the bench.

Faced with similar pressure, judges all over the land, as long as the system endures, will find themselves using very few of their allotted powers, and all too frequently tempering justice with discretion—and by that I mean with an eye to their personal well-being.

Big Doings At School for Xmas

A full and enjoyable day marked the close of Campbell union grammar school for Christmas vacation Friday.

Five reels of comedy were the paramount feature of a morning program. On the same bill were selections by the school orchestra, numbers by the fourth grade glee club directed by Miss Ora Jasper, dances by the students of Ruth Adele Warmke, a play directed by Mrs. Esther Short and Miss Rowena Farman, carols sung by the entire school and lead by Mrs. Ruth Stewart, and presentations by Jewel and Jeanette Abbott, Bobby Smith, Gilbert Goliday and Marilyn Anderson.

The program was followed by a Christmas dinner which was served by Miss Rowena Farman in the school cafeteria to about 300 children.

Classroom parties occupied the afternoon session.

BASKETEERS WIN ONE, LOSE ONE AT LIVE OAK

Basketball at Live Oak Friday night resulted disastrously for Campbell high school's 130-pound squad, which came out on the short end of a 20-8 score.

In the unlimited division the score was even more one-sided, with Campbell winning the tussle 42-4. The book-keeper yelled for an adding machine as Cook piled up a staggering high gun tally of 23 points. Cramer accounted for 9, Persons 7, Stojanovich 2, and Hocking 1.
